The Moon

As I was driving in this morning on the Beltway, the moon was clear and almost full and could easily seen right in front of me. It reminded me of our relationship with Christ!

We should be strictly a reflection of the Son as the moon is a reflection of the Sun. Without the sun the moon is simply a dark, cold rock, but with the sun's reflection it can be seen and shows an awesome beauty that draws our attention and attracts our focus. What we need to remember is without the sun we would never know the moon was there. The same should be true of our relationship with Christ. Let's reflect Him today and everyday, allowing His light and His warmth to reflect through us to others, making Him more significant than ourselves and giving Him all the Praise and Glory!! Without Him we would be a cold, dark, empty soul.

Quoting words from Max Lucado's book, It's Not About Me: "Blame it on Copernicus. He is the one that proved the earth was not the center of the universe back in 1543. Up till that time everyone thought the sun and the solar system revolved around the earth. What Copernicus did for the earth, God does for our souls. Tapping our collective shoulder of humanity, he points to the Son-his Son- and says, 'Behold the center of it all.'"

Have a wonderful God filled day and let's go and reflect the Son to those we come in contact with!

Let's love on people where they are and love them till they ask why!

HE DID IT!
Let's Do IT!
